

FUNCTIONS OF COMMUNICATIONS

berry

nice

Episode 5

Welcome, students!

LESSON FOR THE DAY

FUNCTIONS OF COMMUNICATIONS

Communication is playing a major role in our life. People use different languages to communicate with each other. By means of communication, people tend to speak to give awareness about everything, motivate someone, control or to give direction and persuade. In this topic we will be discussed the different function of communications.

Five Functions of Communications

1. Regulation or Control - It is about to control one's behavior or able to manage someone or group activities by using language, emotions, and gestures. This can be delivered through instruction, commands, or requests.

Examples are:

1. Recipe book where it tells what to do and the measurement of ingredients when you are about to cook some dish or meal.

2. A parent telling his or her children to behave. Where it tells not to misbehave, it controls the behavior of the child.

3. The rules and regulations in the particular organization, community, and location. Where it indicates the Do's and Don'ts. People who will read the rules and regulations will follow.

Five Functions of Communications

Examples are:

1. Waving or greeting someone. Simple waving your hand as well as greeting them is an example of social interaction.

2. Inviting your friends, family, and colleagues on your party.

3. Talking to your friends. Having fun or bonding with your friends or loved ones shows social interaction.

2. Social Interaction- It refers on having a social relationship towards other, having conversations with other people, having fun and bonding with your loved ones. Where it builds relationship, bond, and intimacy that will make your connection or relationship stronger.

Five Functions of Communications

3. Motivation- Function to motivate or to inspire someone by your speech or advice. Where it can encourage someone to do better or to live better.

Examples are:

1. Preaching of Priest in mass. It motivates the audience spiritually.

2. The testimony of people who become successful in their life. Testimony from someone who become successful will motivate the audience.

3. Cheering your friends or other people.

Five Functions of Communications

Examples are:

1. News in television or radio. Where all the information were broadcast through television or radio.

2. Announcements is an example of information dissemination; it is because people will be informed through this.

3. Poster. Where it includes the detailed information of an event or activity

4. Information Dissemination- It refers to give awareness, conveying of conversation, facts, and cascading details based on evidence.

Five Functions of Communications

5. Emotional

Expression- It is to show facial expression without saying any words or facilitates peoples' expression of their emotions or feelings.

Examples are:

1. Giving appreciation to someone.

2. Crying

3. Happy for someone's achievement

Class Recap

There are five functions of communication

REGULATION/CONTROL

1

It is about to control one's behavior or able to manage someone or group activities by using language, emotions, and gestures.

MOTIVATION

Function of communication to motivate or to inspire someone by your speech or advice. Where it can encourage someone to do better or to live better.

3

INFORMATION DISSEMINATION

It refers to give awareness, conveying of conversation, facts, and cascading details based on evidence.

4

2

SOCIAL INTERACTION

It refers on having a social relationship towards other, having conversations with other people, having fun and bonding with your loved ones. Where it builds relationship, bond, and intimacy that will make your connection or relationship stronger.

5

EMOTIONAL EXPRESSION

It is to show facial expression without saying any words or facilitates peoples' expression of their emotions or feelings.

